Last Lecture Thoughts

The last lecture started with many stories based on his childhood dreams and aspirations. While telling these stories, there seemed to be a theme of preservation and learning within each story. I liked how he told many imperfect stories about his life and how these dreams became a reality in some way or another. Randy gave very realistic versions of his experience in how he has achieved his desires which gave a very personal feel to the lecture. Throughout the lecture, he gave lots of insight on how helping fulfill others dreams can be a positive influence on oneself. I thought that was a good perspective to look at those around you and everyone can become successful individually. Randy Pausch's Last Lecture was a unique way to tell his stories and share the importance of fulfilling your dreams.
